Friends:

The United States Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) announced this week that crews completed initial work to remove non-native vegetation, trash and debris within the Los Angeles River.

As you may recall, the work took place between Fletcher and Riverside Drives, and forced the closure of the LA River shared path. The path is open once again during weekdays. The Corps' contractor will continue to perform monthly maintenance within these reaches, however this work will not require any additional closures of the path.

As more users return to utilizing the path, I want to remind people that per California law both bicyclists and pedestrians have a legal right to utilize the path, and should do so with an abundance of care and respect for others. Cyclists should refrain from excessive speed, particularly when pedestrians, children, and slower cyclists are present. It is safer for pedestrians, as slower users of the path, to walk to the right and be mindful of bicyclists.

My office has been working with the local Elysian Valley community, bicycle advocates, and with our City departments to ensure the path is safe for all users. We will continue to be vigilant in reminding residents and visitors alike to share the path.

Warm regards,
